H. Hurst : Shaping a New Order in the Court: A Sourcebook before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Shaping a New Order in the Court: A Sourcebook:

From the Introduction: "Architecture and architects, like law and lawyers, thrive on precision but become ill and weak on a diet of ambiguity and contingency. Therein lies the dilemma for those who would dare proffer design guidelines for building juvenile and family court buildings... Purpose of this Guide The purpose of this guide is to provide designers of juvenile and family court facilities with visions of useful and effective facilities, and not prescriptions or standards. The goal of this project is to identify design issues, provide guidance in addressing these issues and stimulate the creative process... Method Three sources of information were used to inform these guidelines: -the minimal existing design literature on juvenile and family court facilities; -the perceptions of an experienced task group of advisors and consultants, and our staff at the National Center for Juvenile Justice -the results of the first and only post-occupancy survey assessment conducted by the National Center for Juvenile Justice of all those communities that have built juvenile and family court facilities within the last decade."
