Everyone's heard the stories: An aunt's husband dies and the vultures sweep in. She ends up paying $10,000 for a coffin, even more to a lawyer and then loses the rest of her money in shady investments. The financial services sector has become a do-it-yourself marketplace and the point where that hits people hardest is in dealing with worldly matters after a loved one dies. Thornton brings more than a decade of experience in human resources and financial education to an extremely emotional issue. And she gives vulnerable people easy-to-use tools for avoiding or dealing with crooks and crooked business.

In 'The Survivor's Guide' Thornton tackles the difficult (and costly) issue of death with sensitivity, insight, curiosity, toughness and fairness. -- The Miami Herald, February 16, 2004
About the Author V.K. Thornton is a writer and human resources expert living in Southern California. She has written extensively on family, personal finance and consumer protection issues. She is a graduate of Smith College.
