Esmeranda Manful : The Development of Children's Rights in Africa and Euope: Comparing Legislation in Ghana and Northern Ireland before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Development of Children's Rights in Africa and Euope: Comparing Legislation in Ghana and Northern Ireland:

This book is the first to compare the primary child care legislation of a developed and a developing jurisdiction influenced by English juristic ideas. The empirical findings are indicative that there is more than one specific conceptualisation of children's rights; to ensure provision, protection and/or participation rights of the child. Children's rights have become a universal concept however; limited literature exists comparing how the concept is implemented in different jurisdictions. Further, whilst literature abounds on how children perceive their rights, less is known on the views of those with the responsibility for ensuring the welfare of children. This book fills such a gap, by providing an insight into how the abstract concept of children's rights is operationalized by child care professionals in two jurisdictions, Northern Ireland and Ghana.

"... provides us with detailed insights of how professionals are trying to work to advance children's rights in their everyday interactions with children and families. The lessons that can be taken from this remain important, not only for those working in Northern Ireland and Ghana, but also other countries trying to make the UN Convention of the Rights of the Child an effective framework for improving the welfare and rights of children." - Prof. Alan France Loughborough University "... a significant empirical socio-legal contribution to the fields of children's rights and comparative social policy." - Dr. John Pinkerton Queens University Belfast"
