This book is used as a textbook for two of my legal document production classes so I have had the opportunity to examine it. It isn't light reading, but is so full of useful and necessary information that I recommend anyone interested in working in a law office and or producing legal documents get a copy of their own. Everything from terminology to formatting documents is included. In all, this is a very good and useful manual for anyone interested in office administration. I highly recommend it for legal assistants, students, and secretaries alike.

This manual can serve as a reference tool for students in their paralegal or legal secretarial courses and later, in their careers. It addresses the specific grammar and office procedures used in law offices and is considered the definitive reference for questions on format, procedure, and correct setup of law office documents, law office protocol, filing, and report writing.
