Marsha Garrison, Carl Schneider : The Law of Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation, 2d (American Casebook Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Law of Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation, 2d (American Casebook Series):

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Not your typical casebookBy CustomerI really like this casebook for its inclusion of several vignettes in addition to the relevant legal cases. There is much discussion about patient experiences, relevant literature, societal analysis... It makes for a very interesting read that engages the student without being overwhelming.

This casebook teaches students to think like lawyers with many kinds of skill-building problems. It teaches them to think about the problems of regulating bioethical issues not just with cases, but with patients' accounts of their illnesses, doctors' reports of their encounters with patients, ethicists' reflections on our duties to ourselves and those around us, researchers findings on how medical decisions are made, the results those decisions produce, and the impact of various forms of legal regulation. Finally, it teaches students to understand the law broadly with explorations of larger conceptual issues about law and American culture.

About the Author Marsha Garrison is the Suzanne J. and Norman Miles Professor of Law at Brooklyn Law School and Secretary-General of the International Society of Family Law. She is the co-author of Family Law: Cases, Comments, and Questions (6th edition, 2007) and Law and Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation (2nd edition, 2009). Carl E. Schneider is Chauncey Stillman Professor of Law and Professor of Internal Medicine at the University of Michigan. He has written "More Than You Wanted to Know: The Failure of Mandated Disclosure", "The Practice of Autonomy: Patients, Doctors, and Medical Decisions", and numerous other books and articles.
