Henk Leenen, Sjef Gevers, Genevieve Pinet : The Rights of Patients in Europe: A Comparative Study before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Rights of Patients in Europe: A Comparative Study:

This book is based on the results of a study on patients' rights in the European member states of the World Health Organization. Relevant topics such as informed consent; access to patients' medical records; privacy and confidentiality of data; minors' rights; mental patients' rights; complaint procedures; ethics committees; rights of incompetent adults; and civil, penal, administrative, and disciplinary law in health care are discussed in this book. The book also covers the mechanisms for protection and enforcement of these rights. A comparative approach is used, when studying the rules of the various countries, to demonstrate present and future trends. The authors also highlight, analyze, and discuss the response of legislation to the development of patients' rights. This book is ideal for universities, private and public health care organizations, international organizations, lawyers, doctors, and health authorities.
