Not for the uninitiated; subject must be studied to be fully understoodBy Marvin D. PipherThis book reads much like a familiarization manual intended to be studied by new employees for two or three weeks before beginning their assignments at the World Trade Organization (WTO). I use the word 'studied' advisedly, since to truly understand this book and the extent and operations of the WTO one would have to study this book along with other sources and, hopefully, have a knowledgeable person available to answer questions. The book simply covers too much ground while constantly introducing unfamiliar and obscure terms, WTO jargon, and WTO specific terminology. Here are a few representative examples; see if you can grasp them: Grand Bargain, Blue box, The Havana Charter, phytosanitary barriers to trade, non-governmental organizations, customs valuation code, welfare losses, democratic deficit, Multi Fibre Agreement, the emerging safeguards provision, the Most Favored Nation (MFN) rule, the dual-track mechanism, and Mode 4. How'd you do? And here is a typical sentence: "The agreement disallows measures against foreign investors and foreign products that are inconsistent with the GATT's national treatment obligation and the ban on Quantitative Restrictions." Got it? And, finally, you might have to read the paragraph on pages 5-6 nine or ten times before you begin to grasp its full meaning and can move on. If you get the impression that I didn't understand everything I read in this book --- you're right. I now understand the World Trade Organization in its broadest sense, fear its intrusion into domestic affairs and its threat to national sovereignty, and now understand why there have been serious protests and demonstrations at the various WTO 'Rounds,' but that's about it. I can also say, however, that, based on this read, I seriously doubt that more than one in a hundred of the 6,000 or so workers at the WTO have a complete and thorough understanding of the WTO as described herein. So, I don't feel quite so bad. Bottom line: If you're like me, one of the uninitiated masses, you'll likely get a top-level understanding of the WTO by reading this book, but that's about all. So, unless you have been hired by the WTO or are intent on studying it for some other purpose, I can't recommend that you read it. 0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great product - I would absolutely recommend this to anyone. By brittney little Exactly what I was expecting! Great product - I would absolutely recommend this to anyone.

The World Trade Organization (WTO) is scarcely ten years old, but it has already generated a mountain of debate, controversy, and outrage. Rulings on beef hormones and tuna-dolphin cases provide explicit examples of how the organization regulates into areas of individual consumer choice, ethical preferences, and cultural habits. The deep and far-ranging impact of the WTO on peoples' everyday lives means that it is not just an institution of interest to economists, but to everyone, a fact that was perhaps most graphically illustrated by the demonstrations that have become a regular feature associated with high-level meetings of the WTO. This book provides a carefully considered explanation of what the WTO is, what it does, and how it goes about executing its tasks, and gives a clear understanding of the mandate, structure, and functioning of the WTO that is essential to appreciating the controversy behind the organization.

"Narlikar's engagement with public debates is exemplary - a task too rarely attempted by critical scholars in this area. This book is a timely rejoinder to the fledgling study of global governance. An exceptional introduction to the WTO, it also succeeds in doing much more than is says on the tin." --Craig Berry, Political Studies "The author obviously knows her subject...she succeeds well in giving an account of the organization that is both accessible and engaging... If this is the first thing that a student reads on the WTO, then he or she will be well launched into their enquiry." -- Professor Tony Payne, Department of Politics, University of Sheffield.
